The Santa Barbara Leadership Adventure is the perfect adventure for those of you who want to increase your understanding of yourself. As a leader, become even more effective as a "We Thinking" Teammate, and learn beginner level outdoor adventure skills like kayaking, mountain biking, stand up paddling, and navigation-- all in the most stunning classroom on earth and ending in a warm bed at a world class resort each night. The icing on the cake will be putting your leadership and adventure skills to the test in a non-competitive beginner level adventure race on the final day (don't be nervous--ALL fun). If you have a discretionary leadership training budget from your company, this is the very best way to maximize it. :) Bring your entire team!

Taking Risks

How many times in our lives have we put something off because we're not ready, we need more time, we don't feel comfortable, etc etc.

Recent Luuuuuuv for World Class Teams:

"Having followed your career a bit over the years, I had a pretty good sense for how awesome you would be, but it would appear that I underestimated that piece. I say that because we have done these meetings for many years, and while I think they all have been very good, no question that the feedback on you was exceptional! We had our debrief this morning, and we gave you an A+!"

- Howard Halle EVP, Florida Division Manager, Wells Fargo

"Robyn,

I want to personally thank you again for playing such a significant role in the success of our meeting! The feedback on your presentation and messaging, as well as your preparation, has been nothing less than fantastic!"

- Dave Roberts, Medtronic, Inc., Vice President, U.S. Sales, Cardiac and Vascular Group

SIEMENS

"Hi Robyn,

Just wanted to thank you for your fantastic presentation at our Emerging Leaders Forum Summit in Orlando. Your talk was incredibly motivational and inspiring, and the leadership lessons were right on target for this group. Early feedback from participants is off the charts. We'll be thinking about ways to bring you back for other Siemens events!"
